SUMMARY: 2009-2010

WATZEK LIBRARY CONTINUES TO DISTINGUISH ITSELF AMONG LIBRARIES AT SELECTIVE LIBERAL ARTS INSTITUTIONS THROUGH ITS SERVICE ORIENTATION, ITS ENGAGEMENT WITH TEACHING AND RESEARCH, ITS UNIQUE COLLECTIONS, AND ITS USE OF INNOVATIVE TECHNOLOGIES.

Once again, Watzek Library provided the Lewis and Clark community access to resources through our general collection, the Summit union catalog, e-delivery of articles via interlibrary loan, as well as our inter-campus delivery services. We assisted students and faculty with their research in person, online, and via private consultation. Our electronic reserves and research guides helped faculty organize and deliver rich information resources for their courses.

The Library continued to build its print and online collections in collaboration with the faculty. We acquired some important new special collections including the Mountain Writers Series, the Lee Thames Collection and the John Callahan/Ralph Ellison Collection. With support from a President’s Initiative Grant, Special Collections created the William Stafford Archives web site, an innovative digital collection of poetry, and developed an accompanying workshop for teachers. With support from the National Endowment for the Arts, we enhanced the accessCeramics web site and doubled the size of this increasingly popular collection of ceramic art images.

Our new Visual Resources Coordinator, Stephanie Beene, replaced long time Visual Resources Curator Margo Ballantyne after her retirement in September 2009. Over the previous five years, Margo had moved the Visual Resources Collection from an analog slide library serving the Art Department to a service providing access to visual art and culture for the whole College. In the past year, Stephanie built on Margo’s work with the introduction of a new Visual Resources web site, a number of digitization projects for faculty, and many individual consultations with faculty and students across disciplines.

This past year, librarians worked closely with faculty to integrate library resources into their courses. To this end, our librarians taught seventy in-class instruction sessions on library resources and research techniques. As in previous years, we worked closely with faculty teaching Spring term Exploration and Discovery sections to support the research component of that course. Once again, Special Collections organized a number of practicums for students in History, Art History and English. A notable example was a project by Senior Nathalie Figueroa ’10 to organize the papers of Hay Creek Ranch, Oregon’s oldest ranch.

The Library hosted a number of exhibits, readings, lectures, and its annual Watzek Rocks! concert. Two notable exhibits were, “From Aurora to Rajneeshpuram: Oregon Communal History” and “James Gilchrist Swan: Wilderness Intellectual.” For the first time, we honored a student author by hosting a reading by sophomore Marni Bates who read from her memoir, Marni.

In August 2010, the Library lost its director, Dr. James J. Kopp, to cancer. In over a decade of service at Lewis & Clark, Jim broadly re-oriented Watzek Library to address the twenty-first century information needs of the College. Jim was a friend and mentor to the staff of the Library, and we will miss him for his wit, his wisdom, and his kindness.
